Have you seen it? Have you read it?

The Mathematical Intelligencer

If you haven't seen The Mathematical Intelligencer recently, you've missed its fine reporting on mathematics, mathematicians, and the profession itself. With a lively and informal style, The Intelligencer explores a wide range of topics relevant to mathematics, its people, theorems, philosophy, and history. Researchers, students and teachers enjoy The Intelligencer. You will too.

Here's what you would have read in a recent issue*:

K. Appel and W. Haken, "The Four Color Proof Suffices"

Abe Shenitzer, "Some Thoughts on Teaching Mathematics"

Ronnie Lee and Steven H. Weintraub, "An Interesting Algebraic Variety"

Robert Hermann, "Mathematics and Bourbaki"

O.M. Fomenko and G.V. Kuz'mina, "The Last 100 Days of the Bieberbach Conjecture"

E.W. Dijkstra, "On a Cultural Gap"

Lenore Feigenbaum, "Happy Tercentenary, Brook Taylor!"

Judita Cofman, "Thoughts Around an International Camp for Young Mathematicians"
